

Jacqueline Rosenblatt has over 25 years of health care experience including clinical practice, education, informatics, and management. She is currently the Director for Ambulatory Quality Improvement at MPRO and is responsible for strategic planning, implementation and evaluation of Centers for Medicare and Medicaid (CMS) funded projects targeted at quality improvement in the outpatient setting; providing oversight and support for all program components. Additionally she continues to build and maintain strong relationships with key stakeholders including Charter Value Exchange designees, and professional organizations.

Ms Rosenblatt joined as the Electronic Health Record (EHR) Clinical Informatics Advisor; she provided consultative services to providers to assist with office redesign and implementation of effective evidence-based quality improvement interventions and practices related to health information technology. She promoted collaborative partnerships in quality improvement initiatives and statewide campaigns.

Prior to joining MPRO, Ms. Rosenblatt worked as a clinical informatics consultant, assisting ambulatory care providers with selection, implementation, and optimization of electronic health records. She was Clinical Informatics Director at POH Medical Center, where she was responsible for the selection and implementation of clinical information systems. Her clinical experience includes pediatric and neonatal critical care, and nursing education.

Ms. Rosenblatt serves on numerous committees; she is a board member of Michigan Health Information Systems Society, a member of National Health Information Systems Society and a member of American Diabetes Association.

Her experience and dedication to the adoption of Health Information Technology to support quality care delivery and improve efficiency will provide an important component for the SEMHIE governance committee. She has a reputation as a leader with the ability to motivate teams and mediate difficult situations; building consensus among all participants.
